

ENTRANT

Authorized to enter the space

- Know every hazard in this space
- Follow every step — no shortcuts
- Stay in constant contact with your attendant
- Know your alarm thresholds and exit criteria before entering

- Enter without a completed permit
- Enter without the atmosphere tested
- Enter without an attentive attendant in position
- Re-enter without retesting the atmosphere

EXIT IMMEDIATELY IF:

- Any alarm sounds or readings change
- You feel dizzy, weak, or disoriented
- Your attendant orders you out
- Something feels wrong — even if you can't explain why

Familiar does not mean safe. Every entry requires full procedure — every time, without exception.

ATTENDANT

Guardian of the entrant

- Watch this entry and nothing else
- Maintain constant contact with the entrant
- Monitor atmospheric readings continuously
- Know how to summon help — and do it without hesitation

- Leave your post while the entrant is inside
- Monitor more than one entry at a time
- Enter the space to attempt rescue — call for help
- Use your phone or do other work during entry

ORDER EVACUATION IF:

- Any alarm activates or readings change
- Entrant shows distress, stops responding, or goes quiet
- A new hazard appears
- Your instincts say something is wrong — act, don't wait

You have the authority — and the obligation — to initiate rescue. Do not wait for permission.

ENTRY SUPERVISOR

Authorizes and oversees every entry

- Review and verify the permit before signing
- Confirm every control is in place before authorizing
- Walk the team through the permit verbally before entry
- Stay engaged and available throughout the entry

- Authorize a permit you haven't personally reviewed
- Allow entry with incomplete controls — regardless of schedule
- Let schedule pressure override procedure
- Leave without ensuring qualified supervisory coverage

STOP THE JOB IF:

- Any condition changes after entry has begun
- Roles are not being maintained as assigned
- The permit is incomplete or not understood by all parties
- Any team member raises a concern — no matter how small

Culture is built in every moment you choose procedure over pressure.
